There were even tournaments held. However, the game died out and now, the Pune Municipal Corporation (PMC) has decided to revive this forgotten tradition. Chairman of the sports committee of the PMC Avinash Bagwe told reporters on Saturday that the civic body would revive the game in the city. "We will provide infrastructure and promote the game," he said. Once hugely popular, atya patya was played across the city Bagwe was speaking after holding a meeting of prominent sportspersons for suggestions on how to formulate the sports policy of the civic body. Arvind Shinde, group leader of the Congress in PMC, was the one to propose that the game be revived. He said, "Decades ago, young men city used to gather on streets after 9 pm and play atya patya. It was a hugely popular game. People in the neighbourhood used to enjoy all the excitement. There were even tournaments of the game held where competing teams from different clubs would fight fiercely." Shinde added that as traffic increased on Pune roads and as boys got glued to televisions and video games, people stopped playing atya patya. However, many enthusiasts requested that the game be revived in the city. According to the Atya Patya Federation of India, this is an ancient game. The federation says on its website, "The first effort to organise the game was made by Deccan Gymkhana, Pune. They prepared the rules and conducted the matches. The next move was taken by Hind Vijay Gymkhana, Baroda, which made significant changes in the rules and conducted the tournaments to promote and popularise the game." The federation was formed in 1982, at the time of the Asian Games and the first national competition of the game was held in Nagpur. Game plan According to the federation, atya patya consists of four innings, each with a duration of seven minutes. Each team consists of nine players and each game consists of two innings. The playing field is rectangular and divided into strips. The central strip, called the 'sur-pati', is 89 feet long. There are nine perpendicular strips, each 23-feet long and 13-inches wide. These are called trenches. Those who try to cross the trenches are called 'assailants'. At the commencement of play, two batches of assailants assemble in the area between the first trench and the boundary line. The defenders stand on the trenches, one on each trench, facing the front trenches, while the grenadier (sur) stands on the central trench. After the signal for commencement of the inning is given, the grenadier cuts the squares. The grenadier and the defenders try to get the assailants and the assailants try to cross as many trenches as possible during the innings. When all the trenches have been crossed, it is said that the 'lona' has been scored. Something went wrong. Wait a moment and try again. This Game of Atya-Patya, as per the rules framed by Atya Patya Federation of India, consists of four innings, each innings having a duration of 7 minutes. Each team consists of 9 players and each game consists of 2 innings. At the end of each innings, there is an interval for 5 minutes. The match is decided on the basis of best of three games. The side of assailants scores one point for each trench crossed by them. The inning consists of 2 plays of 7 minutes alternately played by assailants and defenders. The play field for Atya-patya shall be marked as shown in the diagram. There shall be 9 Breadthwise strips known as trenches (pati), 23 feet 1 inch long and 13 inches in with, such as AB, CD. The Central lengthwise strip known as the Central Trench (sur-pati) E, F, and is 89 feet 1 inch long and 13 inches wide. (As given in the sketch). The Central trench (sur-pati) divides each of thr 9 trenches onto equal halves. In all, there are 9 trenches on this game. There shall be a clear space of 10 feet around the play fields. Those, who try to cross the trenches are called assailants at the commencement of the play two batches of the assailants, assemble in the area between the frot trench and boundary line. The defenders shall stand on the trenches one on each trench facing the front trenches, while grenadier (sur) shall stand on the Central Trench, ready to cur the squares. The defendants cannot change the trenches during an inning. After the signal for commencement of the inning is given, the grenadier shall cut the squares. He cannot put any assailant out unless he has cut the squares at the start 4 assailant will start the same and then 2nd Batch will play tailor will enter lastly. The Grenadier and the defenders shall try to make the assailants out without committing faults and assailants shall try to cross as many trenches as possible during the innings. If all the trenches are crossed by the assailants, the foremost assailant shall call for a Tond and in that case the defenders will immediately turn about and give Tond. When all the trenches are crossed, it is said that the Lona is scored. As soon as the Lona is scored, Referee shall announce about the same. On such announcement, all the assailants who are not out, shall go up to the front trench and again the play will start. Whichever party scores more points in 2 innings wins the Game. The officials require for the management of the Match are one Referee, One Scorer, and 4 Umpires. One for each player and one for the grenadier with the foremost assailant to mark the trenches crossed by the side and inform the Referee grenadier scorer accordingly.
