Hello, When you take to a friend and you do not want him/her to tell other people about something, which of these phrases is grammatical? This should be discussed only between us That should be discussed only between us That should be discussed only between us That should be discussed only between us Do they all mean the same thing?I think “between” can be used for more than 2 people but I’m not entirely sure.If all this sounded awkward, would there be an appropriate/natural way to say it? I prefer the first option (stay between us). In this case “among” fits best if there are more than 2 people and “between” fits best when there are 2 people. I think “between” can be used for more than 2 people but I’m not sure. Your example is only 2 people. You wanted your example to be three people? If it’s two people, the first option is better. I agree. Cross-posted with Doji Among Us should be tense, but it doesn’t have to be frustrating; having a civil debate about the Imposer at the meeting stage is easy. Most players would agree that Among Us is much better with players who talk through voice chat programs like Discord, but conversations can quickly turn into arguments as crewmates try to track down the imposter at the meeting stage. This is especially true in the last rounds of “Between Us”, when the pressure is high. Although there is no problem with healthy debate, some topics between us become too intense and could guide players away from the game. In addition, chaotic topics are the perfect way for impostors to steal victory, as less information is passed on to crewmates. How can players have a fair and balanced discussion about who is the sus in Among Us? How can players get more wins as crewmates? And what are they trying to interrupt like an impostor? All these can be helped with some basic simple rules that you encounter. Best Rules for a Quiet Meeting Between Us The first rule for a discussion between us is that the player who started the meeting must have the first opportunity to speak. It’s always tempting for players to immediately start asking why an emergency was called or where the body was, but giving the opportunity to speak to the person who called the meeting will almost always answer that question without cluttering the voice chat. In addition, it gives the caller of the meeting an adequate opportunity to explain everything they need, which helps to start a productive discussion. The second suggestion for discussing Impostor Among Us properly is that players who use voice chat to talk to each other should still use in-game chat to help dictate the conversation. It could be A waste of using text chat when players have access to voice communication, but text chat can be critical for aligning questions and scoring points without interrupting the current speaker. Interruptions raise voices and cause a commotion, so avoid them by using text chat to explain that a player wants to talk after it will help keep calm and and The third point is to allow players to defend or explain themselves. It is easy to write as sus and start telling other players to throw them out the airlock, but that will never lead to a productive subject. If the accused player is the impostor or a crew mate, a direct charge is something they will want to answer. Do not allow them to respond will be frustrating and could lead to a break in civilization. The final rule to keep everything civil in Tra We will never lie as a crew mate. Although it might seem obvious, some players suggest to support their claims with lies about whether they saw players vent or kill. It may be tempted to say something like this to support a strong suspicion, but a direct lie will always annoy or anger the player who is lying about. Although the goal is the Impostor, and the player’s suspicion is right, lying will flare the tempers. Ultimately, it does more damage to the game evening than to convince other players through honorable means. With all these combined tips, players should be able to have fun and engage games among us without any crew mate or Impostors get too heated and turn a civil debate on who is really sus into a subject that no one enjoys. The game that took the internet from storm can be very fun to play with colleagues. Between Us we are a game that seems out of nowhere. It was originally released in 2018 by 3 developers that make up Innersloth and recently had an increase in popularity due to the streaming community playing it frequently. You need at least 4 players to play, but the best games are hadYou play with 10. Sometimes it can be a challenge to gather 10 friends to play, but that’s why this game works well to play with colleagues in your spare time, or as a corporate event. We recently started carving out about 30 minutes of the workweek to play, and it’s become a fixture that everyone can’t wait to see. About Us FundamentalsA short recap of the game “You are on a ship with a crew who must complete maintenance tasks around the ship. Once all the tasks are completed, the crew wins. However, there are 1-3 impostors “among us”. Their task is to kill the rest of the crew without being noticed or sabotage the ship causing it to collapse. There’s nothing different about these impostors, so the rest of the crew must keep an eye out for strange behaviour, keep an eye on who goes where, or find a dead crew member to deduce who the impostors are.The turns are pretty fast, with the crew trying to make the impostors. Tasks as fast as possible and impostors who try to kill in secret. At the end of a round (triggered by finding a dead body or pressing the emergency button), it’s time to discuss, share your thoughts and throw “sus” (suspects) at other crew members. The discussion time ends with someone voting, or by jumping and moving on to the next round.The rounds continue until enough crew members die, tasks are completed, or sabotage is carried out.Download InstructionsAt the time of writing, you can play Among Us on mobile devices (IOS, Android), PC and Nintendo Switch. It has a release scheduled for Xbox in 2021. The game is supported by different platforms, so if you have one of these systems, you will be able to play together. Mobile (free) The App Store page for everyoneThe easiest (and cheapest) way to play is on your mobile phone. Visit the App Store on iOS or the Play Store on Android, search “Among Us” and select to install it. PC ($5, sometimes cheaper to sell) The Steam page for usStart with creating an account on Steam. Download the Steam client and log in to your account. Search in the shop “Among us”, buy and start downloading. You can select the option to add a shortcut to the desktop if you want, otherwise you can start the game from Steam-Switch ($5) The Nintendo eShop for With Us pageOpen the Nintendo eShop and search for “With Us”. select the game and press “Proceed to Purchase”. CommunicationAmong Us has a built-in text chat system that you can use to communicate during discussions. This works fine if you don’t have the option of voice chat, but voice chat is preferred. We use a Microsoft Teams channel meeting (with video disabled), which seems to work fine. Other options might be a Zoom meeting, Discord Channel, or any other service your organization uses.There’s an important rule when playing with us: Don’t talk during rounds. You should only during the discussion hours. The best way to avoid slip-ups here is to turn off the microphone during rounds.Creating a Team/GameFor groups larger than 10, an option to avoid having to create a meeting per group would be to use Use New Breakout rooms are available in Microsoft Teams. This would allow you to create as many rooms (games) as you want, and either automatically assign users to each, or assign them manually. Once again, more the merrier in these games. Try to keep your games as close to 10 players as possible. Learn more about using Breakout Rooms in Microsoft Teams So everyone has the game downloaded, you’ve set up a meeting/channel for voice chat, now just set up the game for the group to join. Design a person from the group to create the game. From the main menu, this game must select “Online”, then select the Host (Create Game) option. Don’t forget to set a name for yourself before selecting. Then, there are some options you need to set. At the moment there are 3 maps available to play. For the first time, we recommend The Skeld. Next, you need to select between one, two, or three impostors. We recommend an impostor if you have fewer than eight people, and two impostors for eight or more. Choosing three impostors makes the game very difficult for the crew to win, so proceed cautiously there. Finally, set the Max Players, and you might even leave this to 10 since you will keep the code/game private. Once the person confirms, they are loaded into the lobby of the pregame. Along the bottom of the screen will be a code. They need to share that code with the rest of the group, which should then select “Online” from the main game menu, then enter the code in the lower section “Private.” After submitting the code, they will join the game. Find the code at the bottom of the screen Enter everyone else in the code in the private game entryAppearance It can be fun to play with the names you set for you before entering the game (we use names like “Impostor” or “Me” just to throw some confusion into the game), as well as personal to make your appearance. If you approach the computer in the pregame lobby and select “Customize”, you can select a color, a hat, a pet (need to pay for them), and the hides (again, paid). Recommended Game Settings The last thing before you start á there are some additional game options that you should consider. Along the left, you will see a list of game settings. The default settings work fine, but as you get used to the game you may want to adjust some. Confirm results: Turn off if you want to keep a bit of a mystery about whether the crew member you just expelled was an impostor or not. Anonymous Votes: Enable a little more mystery while voting. It’s not easy to know who’s trying to cancel the vote. Kill Cooldown: Adjust if it seems that either crew members or impostors are always winning. Decrease if crew members continue to win, if you want to make it a little harder for impostors. Remember to update this setting to make sure the Emergency Cooldown setting is lower than the Kill Cooldown setting. This gives crew members an out to be to be to call an emergency meeting at the beginning of a new round (if they think they know who the impostor is) before the impostor can kill again. Application bar updates: Some players look at other players while they are engaged in a task to see if the taskbar (progress) moves when the player moves away from the operation. This may be a bit too much of a saying if the player is or not the impostor. Set it on Meetings to see progress when a meeting is called, or Never if you want to keep it secret. Tasks: This can be thought the same way of the Kill Cooldown “if it seems that crew members need some extra tasks, it plays with the number of tasks to give them a little more to do. Gameplay! Below is a summary of how to play the game for each type of player. Play as a teammateThe map is one of your only friends here. Open it to see an overview of the ship. Start learning the names of the rooms, and what tasks are where. The map will also display an indicator to indicate where your tasks are. Get closer to one of your tasks (you will see it shine in yellow) and select the ‘Use’ button. The task will open for you to complete. Each task is a little different, and too much to explain in this article, but they do their best to be self-explanatory. «Premere the leaves in the mouth», «draw the lever to download the leaves», «Premere the switch highlighted to deviate the energy», etc. Sometimes the impostor can trigger a sabotage, in which the crew members will have to run in a specific area of the map to make a “task” to prevent the sabotage being completed. Keep your eyes open for flashing arrows to stop sabotage. Each map has a sort of area of “observation”. On the Skeld, there is a room where you can walk to a computer to watch a couple of cameras scattered around the map. This can be useful, but note that the red lights on the cameras light up when someone is looking, so the impostor could head towards you to take care of you and avoid being discovered. If you are killed, you will still have to complete your tasks (as a ghost) to help the crew members win. Finally, keep your head on a joint. Do your best to remember who goes where, who is respecting what task, and especially who has just moved away from a corpse. Play as an impostorThere are some things to focus on (as well as kill everyone): Don't seem suspicious, use sabotage to your advantage and use the ventilation ducts to escape quickly. You have to act like a crew mate. What would a crew mate do most of the time? Tasks. Your activity list is filled with some fake tasks for you to try to mix with. InThey do not open up to show that they are “available.” sabotages are a simple way to move people wherever you want. Did you just kill someone on the right side of the map? Call a sabotage on the left side of the map. They’re probably all going that way, there are always some sabotages that arehased (which reach zero, the crew losses), and others that make it harder to move around the ship (the lights out, closed doors, closed communications). To call a sabotage, select the sabotage button at the bottom right and click the sabotage icon you want to happen. Note that there is a cooldown for some of the more important tasks that may require a little to become active again, so be crafted with when you call them. The ducts. One of the most fun parts of the game, but also risky. In many of the rooms are air intakes for the impostor to use to move to other rooms quickly. There is a short animation to enter/exit a mouth, so don't be surprised if you are caught using one. The easiest way to use one is to jump into one right after a murder to hide. Then you just have to make up a good story for where you were. If you’re playing with two impostors, there are some extra items you can play with: The impostors can “fake clear” each other in an attempt to fall su early They can neglect killing for a spin in an effort to buy credibility If you get voted out, you can still access the sabotage window (as a ghost)) and help the other impostor Meetings The screen of voting results After each round there is a meeting to discuss what everyone saw to try to blame the impostor. Everyone has the opportunity to vote for who they think should be expelled from the ship. This is a light section of the article, but don't let it fool you. These meetings will find out who in your team can be deceiving, and who can be deceived. Some of my favorite moments involve encounters right after the impostor kills someone, but sees another crew member in the room, so he self-reports. Then they immediately call the other person in the room, trying to lay the blame on them. Whoever gets the most votes cast towards them will be expelled. If there’s a tie, no one gets expelled. You also always have the option to skip the vote if you don’t have a hard sus. The Team Building (Breaking) Part If you’ve read this far, you probably recognize that this can cause some fun situations to try to build trust with others (rightly or unfairly), or throw others under the bus and cause confusion. Maybe someone made you nervous before daylight, and now you can... Take them away. Joking aside, the game uses all these tools to bring out some creativity and force the team to work together to achieve a common goal. It’s something our team is looking forward to finishing the day on Monday and creating a respirator for everyone to chat and have fun. This idea came because pre-shutdown we enjoyed doing quarterly releases with the team. These included escape rooms, launch axes and sporting events. With all these almost impossible things in 2020/2021, we had to find some alternatives. We quickly discovered that since we were all remote, a quarterly “digital release” wasn’t often enough. This was also around the time we had really really really it didn’t take long to arrange a recurring weekly meeting of 30 minutes at the end of a day to play. While some may think “it doesn’t sound like work”, that’s exactly the point. While a lot of our job is to make sure our clients succeed and do a great job for them, it’s just as important to have a close-knit team that feels well-rested.A simple deatl’s not part of the guidebook, but I thought I’d mention: The game itself is pretty simple. It’s based on a real mafia game that a lot of people have played. The small team of developers took the idea and turned it into a game. It’s inspiring to see stories like this unfold, and it gives reason to believe that if we do things with the right mindset and the right cause, others will see and appreciate what we’ve done (though not right away). I know it can’t happen to everyone, but that doesn’t mean we should stop dreaming.
