Kathryn Hahn in "WandaVision"; Kate Winslet in "Mare of Easttown"; and Kit Young, Amita Suman and Freddy Carter in "Shadow and Bone." Photo Courtesy: [Disney+/HBO/Netflix] Since it's never too soon to start taking inventory of what the new year has brought us, and since we've already seen our fair share of promising new series and returning seasons, let's discuss some of the best — or maybe just most talked-about — TV shows of 2021 so far. Peak TV may have been a bit less abundant than in years past in February and March of this year — the early months of the pandemic also brought a total halt in production that slowed things a bit — but there's still been plenty of good new television to choose from. Here are some of my favorite 2021 titles so far. Antoine Gouy and Omar Sy in "Lupin." Photo Courtesy: [Netflix] This French show starring the charismatic Omar Sy as a gentleman thief with a mild-to-severe obsession with the literary character Arsene Lupin didn't only transport us to the streets and cafés of Paris during its first season. It also proved shows in languages other than English can be big international successes. This Netflix original broke records with 70 million households watching it during the early summer weeks but was equally short, even if it ended in more of a contained manner. Fret not, though — part three has already been confirmed. Hailee Steinfeld and Anna Baryshnikov in season two of "Dickinson." Photo Courtesy: [Apple TV+] Apple TV+ is one more of the many names on the ever-abundant list of available streaming services pining for your subscription dollars. And there are some titles — like The Morning Show and especially Ted Lasso — that justify checking it out for a few weeks. That's also the case for this stylized teen dramedy with Hailee Steinfeld playing poet Emily Dickinson. And while you shouldn't take this show as a history lesson, you can watch it as a good blend of the TV format and poetry in a completely digestible way. Season two has some highs: the strong bond formed between sisters Emily and Lavinia (Anna Baryshnikov) and the family's visit to the chic yet a-bit-too-bohemian spa where the Dickinson women try to relax. Dickinson has already been renewed for a third season. Callum Woodhouse, Nicholas Ralph and Samuel West in "All Creatures Great and Small." Photo Courtesy: [Playground Television UK Ltd & all3media international] This soul-soothing tale of a Glaswegian veterinarian who ends up practicing in Yorkshire treating sick cows and spoilt dogs is based on a series of autobiographical books by James Herriot. Set right before WWII, the PBS Masterpiece features some very arresting landscapes — the show was shot on location at Yorkshire Dales National Park. Its sick-animal-of-the-episode-that-needs-care formula doesn't necessarily align with some of the more complex and sophisticated storylines that have proliferated in Prestige Television these last few years. But at the beginning of 2021 and with the pandemic still raging, the idea of getting a furry creature cured by the end of an episode proved to be the perfect antidote to some of our pandemic fatigue. Plus, the episodes also include a good amount of humor and quiet times that allow the characters to enjoy a much-needed cup of strongly brewed tea with shortbread biscuits. Elizabeth Olsen in "WandaVision." Photo Courtesy: [Disney+] Considering the box office triumph of Avengers: Endgame and the previous Marvel Cinematic Universe's installments, WandaVision's popularity is no surprise. Not for nothing, the nine-episode limited series was the first new Marvel title to be released since Spider-Man: Far From Home hit theaters in July of 2019. What caught most viewers and TV critics by surprise was WandaVision's singularity. By paying homage to different classic TV sitcoms the audience a change of scenery and meta-references every week. Plus, it also gave us Kathryn Hahn playing a nosy neighbor with an enchanting backstory. And of course, this wasn't the only MCU show we've been obsessed with this year. While The Falcon and the Winter Soldier doesn't necessarily fall among my favorite shows of 2021 (I tell you why in this article where I compare the second Marvel show to the much superior WandaVision) but I can't just ignore it completely. For one, it had the most-watched series premiere on Disney+. That's until Loki premiered, of course, and broke that most-watched record again. Plus, overall the show pleased me quite a bit more than The Falcon and the Winter Soldier but not as much as WandaVision. I loved the whole mash-up of comedy, time-travel adventure and procedural crime investigation, though. Plus, watching Tom Hiddleston playing the mischievous character is always a delight — even more so when Loki finds his perfect buddy in Owen Wilson's Mobius. Omari Douglas, Lydia West, David Carlyle, Calum Scott Howells and Nathaniel Curtis in "It's a Sin." Photo Courtesy: [HBO Max] Neil Patrick Harris does a British accent and has a small role in this five-episode limited series from Queer as Folk creator Russell T Davies. Set in 1981, the show tells the story of a group of gay men — Ritchie (Olly Alexander), Roscoe (Omari Douglas) and Colin (Callum Scott Howells) — and their woman friend Jill (Lydia West). They all meet in London, a city synonymous with freedom and hope. As with Davies' previous show Years and Years, It's a Sin shows years going by quickly and depicts a decade in which the characters are forced to learn to live with the threat of AIDS. Kate Winslet in "Mare of Easttown." Photo Courtesy: [HBO] This seven-part limited series created by Brad Ingelsby (The Way Back) stars Kate Winslet as a small-town detective with a new case to solve and a past that haunts her everyday life. Ignore SNL's sketch about the very specific accent the English Winslet manages to adopt in this Philadelphia-set show. Her performance will surely garner her an Emmy nomination. Apart from Winslet's performance, you can enjoy Mare of Easttown for its many mystery twists and turns and for the solid cast that includes Jean Smart showing the perfect way to camouflage ice cream if you liked her here, check out the comedy Hacks on HBO Max, where she plays an addicted-to-work stand-up comedian. But going back to Mare of Easttown, it's not that often, especially in these binge-watching times, that we keep obsessing over the new episode of a TV show every Sunday night — or that we lament not knowing what to do with ourselves once the show has finished airing. And even though this was initially created as a limited series, there's already buzz about a possible second season. Director Raoul Peck and Josh Hartnett on the set of "Exterminate All the Brutes." Photo Courtesy: [HBO] This four-part documentary series is directed by Haitian filmmaker Raoul Peck (I Am Not Your Negro) and revisits some of the darkest moments in humanity's history. The series weaves archival documentary material with interpretive scripted scenes. Josh Hartnett stars in those scripted portions. The series makes us reevaluate history, revisiting European colonialism, Native American genocide and American genocide and Schmieding in "Rutherford Falls.' Photo Courtesy: [Peacock] Don't judge this comedy by its Ed Helms cover — it's much more than just that. Helms is one of the co-creators and executive producers here, along with Michael Schur (Parks and Recreation) and Sierra Teller Ornelas, who is Navajo, is one of the five Native writers on this show. Rutherford Falls has one of the largest Indigenous writers' rooms, according to Peacock. The show follows Helms as Nathan Rutherford and Jana Schmieding as Reagan Wells. They're lifelong friends, but their relationship hits a bump when Nathan refuses to accept the removal of a statue of one of his ancestors, which sits literally in the middle of the small town where they both live. Schmieding and Michael Greyeyes play two of the members of the fictional Minishonka Nation who also have a pivotal role in this show. Rutherford Falls has been praised for its Native American depictions and inclusive representation. Amita Suman and Jessie Mei Li in season one of "Shadow and Bone." Photo Courtesy: [Netflix] The proposition was risky. Shadow and Bone creator Eric Heisserer decided to blend the stories and characters from two of Leigh Bardugo's Grishaverse series of novels: the trilogy Shadow and Bone become one more example of why fantasy is having a moment on TV, but the show also proved the value of having a diverse ensemble cast, with some of the supposedly secondary characters stealing all the scenes. The thing is, who wouldn't want to watch Inej (Amita Suman), Jesper (Kit Young) and Kaz (Freddy Carter) pulling off all sorts of stings? Aaron Pierre and Thuso Mbedu in "The Underground Railroad." Photo Courtesy: [Amazon Prime Video] Academy Award-winner and filmmaker Barry Jenkins (Moonlight) turns his gaze toward television, serving as showrunner and director of this 10-episode limited series. Based on Colson Whitehead's Pulitzer Prize-winning novel, The Underground Railroad tells the story of Cora (Thuso Mbedu) after she escapes a Georgia plantation in the antebellum South and discovers an actual railroad and a covert network of tunnels. You can always count on Jenkins to narrate a story in the most cinematic and exquisite way possible, while also discovering new faces like Mbedu and Aaron Pierre. Brad Pitt is an executive producer for this show through his production company Plan B, which also backed Jenkins' movies Moonlight and If Beale Street Could Talk. Vicky McClure and Kelly McDonald in season six of "Line of Duty." Photo Courtesy: BBC This BBC show that, in the U.S., can be watched on Hulu and Britbox — which has season six of "Line of Duty." new. But its most recent sixth season garnered the show a lot of traction and made headlines. The season finale broke records in the United Kingdom by becoming the most-watched drama episode, other than a soap opera, since 2002. The British police procedural, which actually shoots in Northern Ireland, focuses on the Anti-Corruption Unit 12 (AC-12). I do have a tendency not to root for them but for the alleged "bent coppers" they relentlessly investigate. It probably helps that said bad apples have been performed by Lennie James (Snatch), Keeley Hawes (Bodyguard), Polly Walker (Rome) and Thandiwe Newton (Westworld).Kelly McDonald (Boardwalk Empire) finds herself at the center of AC-12's interest during season six. And we also finally find out the identity of the nefarious H. Season seven of this addictive show that's packed with twists and turns is still up in the air. Michael Cimino and George Sear in the second season of "Love, Victor." Photo Courtesy: Hulu If you're searching for the perfect short and sweet binge-watch that packs enough humor and a little bit of teen romance, then Love, Victor is what you're looking for. Watch the 16 year olds Victor (Michael Cimino) and Benji (George Sear) as they figure out their many differences. This dramedy centers on several teen LGBTQ+ stories, but also focuses on the roles the parents play in their lives — namely their support or lack of it. As in season one, the second season of this 10-episode-per-season Hulu show packs a killer soundtrack, very timely and culturally sensitive punchlines and enough soapy melodrama to keep you hooked. That's hardly all the television we've seen or talked about during this first half-season of the year. There was the food and travel docuseries Stanley Tucci did in Italy for CNN, Stanley Tucci Searching for Italy, as well as the food program with celebrity chefs, muppets and Michele Obama, Waffles+Mochi, on Netflix.If, last year, you liked the period fantasy horror show that commented on race, Lovecraft Country, this year you've probably liked Them on Amazon. For lovers of space history and alternate universes, there was the second season of For All Mankind on Apple TV+. And for lovers of Victorian London and alternate universes, there was the miniseries biopic Halston, starring Ewan McGregor as the famed fashion designer. The show was co-written and executive produced by the very industrious Ryan Murphy. HBO even managed to produce a second teen dramedy about what it is to be a member of Generation Z, Gene there. And Apple TV+ gave us a backstory episode on the character C.W. Longbottom in Mythic Quest.But tell us, what did I miss on this list? What have been your favorite TV shows so far? Written By Car Bibles Staff Published Jul. 30, 2021 There are few things more fun than personalizing or tricking out your vehicle. The market is literally flooded with gadgets and accessories designed to make your drive more enjoyable and more comfortable. With so many items available, it can be tough to tell which gizmos are really worth your time and investment, or which ones are better left in your shopping cart. We've got you covered with our list of the top 25 favorite gadgets for your vehicle. We've sorted through hundreds of options in order to come up with some of the most useful and innovative products. You'll be surprised at the functionality and ingenuity behind some of these different selections. 25 Cool Gadgets for Your Car The AstroAI Digital Tire Pressure Gauge is a handy tool to keep with you on the road. It might not be the most exciting car gadget, but it's quite important when you're dealing with low tire pressure. This device can help you keep your tires at the correct pressure adjust display for easy readings and a lighted nozzle so you'll have visibility whether it's dark, dim, or light out. The nozzle forms a tight seal with any schrader-style tire valve and can deliver a pressure reading that's accurate within 0.1 increments. This digital tire pressure gauge offers four different settings and ranges: PSI, Bar, kgf/cm, and KPA. It's very easy to use, with an on/off button and an automatic shut-off feature that turns the tool offer if it hasn't been used in 30 to 40 seconds. And this tire pressure gauge is versatile too. Keep it in your car for your vehicle tires, or bring it along with you if you're driving out to a trail to ride your bike. It can handle all different types of tires. This waterproof cargo bag has a max carrying and offers 18 cubic feet of rooftop storage space. This rugged cargo bag has a max carrying capacity of 110 pounds, so you can cram plenty of gear in there. It's designed to fit on cross rail systems that are rated for 150 pounds or more. We like the aerodynamic design of this carrier on, so you'll need to purchase that separately if you don't already have one. This will, of course, add to the overall cost of the item. This unit does come equipped with all necessary mounting hardware and keys. Related Post: Best Roof Mounted Cargo Boxes Key Features Roof-mounted cargo holder with a capacity of 18 cubic feet Fully waterproof and hard cover for protection Offers a weight capacity of 110 pounds Key locking mechanism to keep gear secure while underway Fits square, aero, and round crossbars up to 4 inches wide Specification Brand Jegs Model 90098 Weight 25 pounds Nowadays, we use our phones for everything from playing music to navigating, so it makes sense to keep them accessible while driving. WizGear's magnetic phone mount allows you to easily do just that, holding your phone securely in place. It's easy to install in virtually any air vent, with a simple but effective clip system. This position means that, unlike other phone mounts, the view out of your windshield isn't blocked at all. The mount comes with a small metal plate that is attached to your phone, making for a strong magnetic connection that won't become dislodged even on rougher road surfaces. This compact little refrigerator measures 10 x 7 x 10.5 inches and has a 4-liter capacity. It can easily fit in your car's back seat and plugs right into your 12-volt cigarette lighter. You can also use it at home or while staying in a hotel with the included AC wall outlet adapter. This little portable fridge can hold up to six 12-ounce cans, or use it for keeping groceries cold on the road. A clever pocket door provides additional storage. The shelf is removable for even greater versatility and food storage options. We also like that this unit only weighs 3.5 pounds. One thing we don't love is the quality of the rubber seal that locks air in the fridge. It seems a little flimsy and could be much more substantial. It also doesn't do double duty as a heater like some other options.
