The automobiles can not be only a means to get somewhere, but also a way to escape from the daily routine. In the relaxing leather cocoon and wood inside a good automobile, the outside world stops, nothing else matters. But Amy Fine Collins, a correspondent for the Vanity Fair, was one of the many Americans with a phobia of handling. She had almost died in three car accidents, and two of her grandparents of her were killed at horsepower. In addition, the cars really make sense when you live in Manhattan? See all 2 photos of the resolution of the early century, finally pushes Collins to get your driver's license from New York, but it ends up receiving more than a simple piece of plastic. The instructor of him, a dark and mysterious Turkish called Attila, quickly demonstrates to being more psychiatrist than a simple management teacher. He he has a superhuman skill to enter the heads of his students, find his fears and extract them. Collins discovers that the good technique of conduction can be translated into important lessons of life. Become a relaxed and elegant driver calm the rest of her life. With Attila to her side, Collins has fun more and more deeply in the addiction to the automotive. She exchanges Beee to And Manolo by Mercedes. "Driving a stick change," proclaimed, "was one of the greatest joys of this land. There was something immensely satisfying about the harmony between the flesh and the machine, without disordered emotions on the road, I suppose, as there it was when two bodies were found." It begins to shorten its assistance to luxury parties to attend debuts in luxury sedan and autoschools, explore the East Coast in Vipers and AMG Benzes, and rent Harleys and Ducatis for the excitement of the weekend. He even travels across the Atlantic to take a walk in the luxurious cabin of a Maybach 62. The climax of the book comes when Collins ventures into a Pennsylvania road that had persecuted her in nightmares since childhood and finally burys her phobia with a quick movement of the right foot, from top to bottom in a convertible Bentley Azure. Collins's story is intriguing. His writing is sexy, his soft style. Car enthusiasts will be identified with Attila's audacity and confidence, but at the same time they can remember through Amy's growing automotive passion; non- enthusiasts will love her entertaining observations on passenger seats and philosophical realizations. The community of the style and the world of the car intertwine with a special beauty thanks to the warm friendship of an unlikely duo, while the gifts of life lessons during the journey make history more captivating. This is a must read for anyone looking for a cool and fun view of the driving world. THE LAST IN THE COUNTRY NEWS Share on FacebookShare on Twitter During Operation Desert Storm, there was a hymn that came to define the war: Lee Greenwood's country song "God bless the United States" when Greenwood launched the song originally in 1984, it was moderately successful. The song reached #7 on the Billboard Hot Country Songs list on July 28, 1984. However, the song covered a renewed life during Operation Desert Storm. Greenwood played an hour special for troops on February 3, 1991. That "Walt Disney World" concert greetedAnd it was transmitted to sea vessels on the high seas and military personnel in more than 130 countries. In an interview at that time, Greenwood said, a € eye, here within the safety of our country's coasts, we send this gift of entertainment to illuminate hearts and and The days for all the sons and daughters of America, particularly those involved in the operation of the desert storm. A specific line in the song expressly calls a thank-you to those who served. In the chorus after Greenwood sings "and I'm proud to be American, where at least I know I'm not free", follows that. "and I didn't forget the Men who died, who gave me that right to myself. Greenwood said in an interview with the boot, "I called my producer, and I said, "I have a need to do this". I've always wanted to write a song about America, and I said, "We just need to be closer together." Live the song in the Greenwood anthem lives. Following the terrorist attacks of September 11, the song again became a hit, uniting the country. During 2020, Greenwood released a new version, working with the band of the United States Air Force to inspire a new generation. Singers from the band in Washington, D.C., joined singers in Los Angeles, California and Minneapolis, Minnesota. Greenwood joined her home in Nashville, Tennessee. Watch the video on youtube youtube
