For those of you who have started the search for college admission, you can have heard of the concept of a "security school." What is a security school? Simply, a security school is the one in which the odds to get in are extremely high. All those who apply to college should apply to security schools. Why? If you don't want to be rejected by all schools applied to. In this article, you will define you and explain the concept of a security school. Furthermore, it will be illustrated how to identify your security schools and determine the number of security schools should be applied to. What is a security school? A security school is a school that is almost guaranteed to enter. Your GPA should be well above the average of the students is in that school and your SAT or ACT score should be above 75th percentile for that school. In other words: a security school is the one that you have the possibility of entering myself, I would say that you should have at least 80% of possibilities to obtain admission, based on the numbers, to consider a college A security school. Furthermore, no college with a rate admissions lower than 15% can never be considered a security school. If a school is selective, regardless of your degrees and SAT scores, you can never take for granted that your admission probabilities will be more than 80%. The most selective routine schools reject students with perfect grades and standardized test scores. Here is a hypothetical example to illustrate the concept of a security school. Example Brittany has a 3.75 GPA and received a 680 Sat Evidence-based reading and writing score and a score of 700 Sat Math. You have applied to Arizona State University. Asu is a security school for her? Yes. The average GPA for ASU is 3.54, and the 75th percentile SAT scores are 620 for EBRW and 625 for math. The 75th Percentile Sat score is 1360. Furthermore, the rate of admissions for ASU is 85%. Brittany must feel extremely confident that you will be hospitalized in ASU and can be used as a security school. Brittany security school How to identify security schools How do you know what schools to use as security schools? Many students will apply to their less competitive schools in public state as security schools, especially because in a state of public university tend to offer lower registration rates for in-state residents. Furthermore, there are schools that offer guaranteed entry if you reach a certain GPA and SAT / ACT score. Most of these colleges are state schools and the offer extends to in-state residents. There is a guaranteed route for the entrance for residents in California at the University of California schools and automated access programs in Iowa, Missouri, Mississippi, Texas and Nevada. The search for admission requirements of a school on his website to determine if there is a similar offer to that school. You can refer to the famous university lists from sources like US News & World Report, Forbes, and Princeton Review and research schools that meet some of the criteria you are looking for in a college. Your standardized test scores should exceed 75th percentile and your GPA should be above average school for, possibly, consider a college a security school. You can also use Prepscholar tools. If you enter the SAT score here, Prepscholar will automatically give you a list of possible security schools based on the SAT score. Furthermore, Google possible "(school name) Prepscholar admission requirements" and use the admissions calculator on Of a school to get an approximate idea of your admission opportunities. If you have at least 80% depending on the calculator, then you can probably catalog the school as a security school. If you know university students who had lower qualifications than yours, you can search for colleges that are attending and see if you can use one of these schools, your security schools as well. Keep in mind that your GPA and SAT scores are just two components that determine if you are accepted in a school. Your extracurricular activity, recommendations, essays, and e Play also a role when your application is evaluated. However, GPA and SAT / ACT scores are the most important factors and are the most objective available statistics. If your GPA and standardized test scores are much higher than those of the typical applicant, then other components of your application can be weaker and you will probably have admission. How many security schools should you apply? There is no number of security schools that you should apply, but make sure you are open to attend the schools you are asking. It is a waste of time to apply to a school that you would never have participated. The college application process can be expensive and expensive in terms of time, especially if applying to schools that do not use the common application. Generally, I recommend the application of 1/3 security schools. If applying to ten schools, at least three should be considered security schools. You want to give you some options from schools that are very likely to admit. Thus, 1/3 of the schools that are candidate to be reachable schools, schools that could refuse based on your qualifications or their extremely low acceptance rates. The remaining 1/3 of the schools that applies can be target schools, schools that offer you about a probability of admission by 30% -80%. Some students decide to apply to a higher percentage of the Reach schools because they are more interested in going to those schools and are confident that they will enter one. The most important thing is to apply to at least a couple of security schools to ensure that you will have more options during the college selection process. Enter the options! Quick Review A security school is a college to which you have an extremely good probability of obtaining admission (above 80%). You can safely assume you will be accepted. Identify possible security schools with consultant websites, lists of rankings and friends. Consider public colleges in a state that are security scholastic options. Use the admissions calculator on the Prepscholar database to determine if a certain school could be a security school. Find out if there are schools to which you qualify for automatic admission. Apply to about 1/3 security schools. Make sure you have options. What's next? Information To start the application process? We guide you through how to write on extracurricores on your college applications. Also, learn what to do if you have a high GPA score but low satellite. Finally, as you are considering your university options, read if you should consider the possibility of going to college out of the state. Do you want to improve your 160 points SAT score or your 4-point ACT score? We have written a guide for each test on the first 5 strategies you need to use to have a shot to improve your score. Download it for free now: there are a number of options to get children at school, and there are pros and cons of each. Parents could also use different methods for different moments of the year - after all, even if a child could be more than happy to walk to school in sunny hot weather, they are probably less inclined to undertake that thunderous trekking uphill in both directions, in the snow, without shoes - Know the story. There is some advice to reveal the transport experience. Check them and decide which path will work better for you and your little ones. Your many school districts are the kids, and while this is usually the most secure way to get to and from school, some precautions can make it even more. Children should not cut it too close when they are directed towards the bus stop - the goal is to be in a lot of time and limit any spigolizer. The bus driver is the head, so if they are giving a signal when it is safe to cross or other instructions, they must be respected. Children need to stay out of blind bus driver spots and walk where they can be seen. Children should also be taught to always care carefully, never mischievement between parked cars or expect other vehicles to stop for them. There are a number of By carsharing - helps reduce traffic congestion, helps reduce emissions and perhaps most considerably: it decreases the amount of jockeying cars for space in the collection and drop-off lanes. This may not seem like a big problem, but those are areas of main accidents, both between vehicles and between vehicles and pedestrians. Do not let children distract you while driving and keep the close-up cards on safety belts and windows. When the time comes to let them fall or pick them up, use extreme caution and follow all school guidelines to reduce the possibilities that you will be one of those involved in an accident. The brands can really get a football football at school. Walking with friends or brothers give them the possibility of socializing, and the journey can make them feel independent and autonomous. Moreover, it is a good exercise and has a number of benefits for positive health. But there are some rules that children should follow to make sure their journey go smoothly. For example, all traffic laws must be respected. Children should always pause to a sidewalk and look left-left-left before crossing, use sidewalks and crossings, where you can listen to the guards of the guard and give car the right to pass. If there is no sidewalk, it can be a good idea to walk to tackle traffic - then if a car is coming, the children can clearly see that they need to take off a middle. Sometimes drivers have problems identifying children - they are usually small, after all - then teach your children to use caution and never hire that a car will see them and be able to stop them in time if you need arise. Biking is Another option Energy children can have fun. But how to walk, children should be warned to follow traffic laws and use caution when cars are around. The signals of the bicycle hand are important to let others on the road know what you are planning, and lightweight or light-colored reflective are a good idea. The importance of a helmet cannot be stressed enough. Children who are worried about helmet hair will have to take another route because the helmets are an absolute need. Make sure the helmet fits huddled and is adequately adjusted. Also, it's not enough to enough, make sure it's at any time. If a helmet passes through an ugly accident, it should be replaced - damages may not be visible but the structure could be weakened. Children must keep an eye on for cases of sketched land, such as holes or cracked pavement, and if a bike wool is available that they should use it. If not, they need to stay away from traffic as perhaps they can - but still go with the flow of traffic in their direction. It's nothing like terror to watch a teen take off by just a car's wheel for the first time. Certainly - they know every last thing there is to know about driving, but it is likely to be good, they will review the high high opinion of themselves when they look back in a few years. This is said, there are a couple of pointers can try to drive home if your teenager is in a kind of listening mood. Above all, a seat belt is fundamental. Equivalent to wear a helmet while by bike, it is essay to impress on them the importance of wearing the seat belt at all times. Another adolefoic adolefo is the tendency to text, eat, talk on the phone, apply makeup, etc. Etc. while they are driving. We could all be guilty of this time at a time, but adolescents should be encouraged not to indulge in bad Another big no-no is excess speed. It does not really make it really great than a difference in terms of time saved, especially compared to the enormous difference that makes impact speed, speed, speed.
