Downloading movies is a straightforward process that's easy for anyone to tackle, but you should be aware of a number of components before starting. You want to make sure your computer is prepared for the downloading is not the same as streaming. Knowing the difference between downloading and streaming might save you lots of time, and there are important benefits and disadvantages to both. One of the most important things to remember when downloads to stay under 5 GB, some of the super high-definition videos might require 20 GB of space or more. For reference, most newer hard drives come with 500 to 1,000 GB of space. Before downloading a movie, check that you have enough free space. One easy way to see which files off of the primary hard drive or delete anything to free up space, you might end up having to store the movie on a different hard drive like a flash drive or external hard drive. Since movies are some of the largest files you can download, they take much longer to save to your computer than a regular file like a song or image. One way to make sure your entire network doesn't slow down in the process is to use a download manager, especially one that supports bandwidth control. Download managers are helpful not only in categorizing and storing downloads but also for limiting how much bandwidth the downloads are allowed to use. Since movies usually take a while to fully download, they tend to suck away bandwidth from other devices on your network in the meantime. If, while downloading movies, other devices on your network are slowing down, videos are buffering, and there's a general sense of lag, configure the downloads so that they can only use a fraction of all the available bandwidth, like 10 percent or 20 percent. It's also possible that your internet connection simply doesn't support fast downloads. For example, if you pay your ISP for a 2 MB/s download speed, you can download a 3 GB movie in around 25 minutes. If you want to be able to save a movie of the same size in just five minutes, your network must support speeds as fast as 10 MB/s. You can test your internet speed to make sure you're actually getting what you're paying for. Movies downloaded through torrent websites have a high risk of adding malware to your computer. Make sure your computer is secure with an antivirus program to catch any threats before they can do damage, and always do regular scans to check for malware. In addition to anti-malware software, it's important to educate yourself on how to spot a fake torrent or fake download website. Fake movie downloads will attach a nonvideo format file extension like .EXE or .MSI at the very end of the file to trick you into opening a program instead of a video. Normal video files usually end with .MP4, .AVI, .MKV, or .MOV. Another component to watch out for when downloading movies is the size of the file. If it's too small, like less than 300 MB, then the video is probably not real. Most movies are much larger than 300 MB and usually end up falling in the range of 700 MB to 5 GB. It's common to download a movie and then not know how to open it. Fortunately, you can pick from plenty of absolutely free video players that will support the movie format. One of the most popular freeware video file formats like MP4 and AVI, plus others like MKV, MOV, WMV, and many others. Stick to this program if you're ever unsure how to play the movie you've downloaded. Some movie downloads are 100 percent fake and will try to convince you that you have to install their special software program in order to see the video. They might even start showing the beginning of the movie and then stop and display a message about how you don't have the right program installed. Unfortunately, those kinds of videos are not real videos at all. They're made for the sole purpose of tricking you into thinking that if you buy this or that, or click a certain link, the movie, but remember that they are not real; the movie does not really exist in that file. Ignore those messages, delete the video, and try getting the movie elsewhere, preferably through a more reputable movie download website. Thanks for letting us know! Tell us why!
